

Who is the FIA?

The Fire Industry Association, or the FIA as we are more commonly known, is a not-for-profit trade association with the aim of promoting the professional status of the UK fire safety industry.

Our core values are:

- To demonstrate and promote the highest ethical standards
- To constantly strive for the highest effective standards of fire safety
- To be recognised as THE experts in providing solutions to fire protection problems
- To provide an open, transparent and equal forum for members regardless of size

Our main objective is to promote the professional standards of the fire industry through close liaison and lobbying with Government and official bodies as well other key organisations in the industry.

We aim to inform our members and the general market about the latest legislation and how it can affect their businesses.

We provide technical knowledge and advice regarding fire protection for people and property in the UK to anyone who needs it.

We also provide training courses to members and non-members on the latest technical and legislative topics to affect those working within fire safety.

How can the FIA help?

All of the FIA's members are involved in the manufacture, installation and maintenance of fire safety equipment or are fire risk assessors. In order to become a full member every business must adhere to strict criteria, which includes third party accreditation. Third party accreditation schemes ensure that the products, systems and services provided by a member company are fit for purpose and the FIA firmly believes that these schemes also demonstrate competence as referred to in the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005.

If you employ the services of one of our members you know that they will provide the required level of performance in compliance with relevant standards, reassuring you that you have undertaken all reasonable steps required to fulfill your responsibilities under the Fire Safety Order.

As well as the reassurance from using our member businesses, we can also help you learn more about what your commercial responsibilities are in your workplace with regard to the Fire Safety Order. You can find everything you need on our website, from members in your area through to guidance on the Responsible Person's duties.
